"DOLLARS and SENSE"

By H. J. Barrett

A Bookbinder Supplies an Unexpressed Demand and Profits Thereby.

It is a well-recognized fact that the buying habits of various cities differ greatly. This is due, in part, to local conditions, to the temperaments of the populace but perhaps in even greater measure to the efforts of individuals to influence the public's expenditures.

For example: San Francisco contains scores of elaborately appointed, well patronized cafes in which thousands of dollars are spent nightly. Thousands of people take their capacities (the cafes) until well into the small hours. In Los Angeles, however, a city of about the same size, there are but three or four cafes of this character. Apparently every one in the Southern city is in bed by 11 o'clock. On the other hand, Los Angeles is said to contain more automobiles than any city in the United States. And a glimpse of its streets and boulevards would tend to support this claim. Apparently the money which in San Francisco is spent in the cafes and on nocturnal amusements, in Los Angeles is directed to the automobile business.

Probably Los Angeles contains particularly enterprising auto dealers. Unquestionably, San Francisco's cafe proprietors are adept in supplying and even in influencing the public's demands.

Occasionally an enterprising individual succeeds in discovering some long-felt but hitherto unexpressed demand. Here is one instance of such a case.

Winton ran a thriving little book-binding establishment. Most of his business was derived from supplying the needs of private individuals and libraries. He made no effort to compete with the great commercial plants which catered to the demands of the big publishers.

Every now and then Winton would receive an order for dye-stamping the binding of a gift book with the name of the recipient in gold letters, sometimes with an appropriate sentiment appended. This process is very expensive, costing but 25 cents a line.

There must be a great many people who would like to avail themselves of this service," thought Winton. "But they don't know that it can be done, or in any case they don't know WHERE it can be done. And as my occasional customers are always surprised at the low cost probably most people imagine the expense to be prohibitive. I wonder if I couldn't develop this as a profitable specialty."

How Does Roach Food Kill Roaches?

Roaches are too cunning to be easily caught. Some unusual way must be used to entice them from their hiding places under sinks, toilets, in cracks and under floors out of sight. So a bait is used. In this bait consists of seven food substances that roaches like. These foods are so cleverly mixed with chemicals that roaches will eat it greedily; 29 years' experience has taught us how to make it just right. Roaches are enticed from their hiding places by the pleasing scent of this Roach Food. They eat it, become deathly sick and scurry to their hiding places, where they soon die. No odor—and no dead roaches.

Merit, and words of praise from housewives have made Peterman's the most generally used and the most widely imitated of all household insecticides.

Peterman's Discovery (liquid) is a powerful destroyer of bed bugs and their eggs. Nothing else so sure.

Peterman's Ant Food kills ants. Peterman's Moth Food keeps moths out of clothing, etc.

Reliable dealers everywhere sell and recommend Peterman's. Be sure you get the genuine. Some unscrupulous competitors try to copy the red can, but they can't copy the powder. That's our secret.

Dr. Peterman's Personal Guarantee to You

I hereby guarantee that Peterman's Roach Food and Peterman's Discovery (liquid) will entirely rid any building or premises of roaches, water bugs or bed bugs if the above preparations are used in accordance with directions plainly printed on each package.

I authorize any dealer to cheerfully refund the purchase price of either of the above preparations to the purchaser who can show that under the above conditions the preparations have not rid the premises of bugs, and charge the sum to us. It will be promptly paid.
